Having never jumped on the Mimobot bandwagon, we weren't terribly excited when the Halo series made its debut last week. But then we realized that it had stolen the spotlight from the real star in our book: Domo-kun.

Our favorite sharp-toothed character from Japan has shown been incarnated in a line of Mimobot USB flash drives that blow away all others. In addition to the classic Domo X, they also come in Ninja Domo and—best of all—Rasta Domo.

As with other Mimobots, they have storage sizes ranging from 512MB to 4GB. But as far as we're concerned, the Rasta Domo is worth its weight in gold without any flash drive at all—which is a good thing, because its memory may be perennially clouded.
